

MINNESOTA - New Bulletin Helps Growers Manage the Rotation from Alfalfa to Corn Jeff Coulter, University of Minnesota Extension

Crops following alfalfa usually benefit from reduced or eliminated nitrogen requirement from fertilizer or manure, increased yield potential compared to following other crops, and reduced pest pressure. A new Extension bulletin describes management practices for alfalfa termination and the two subsequent corn crops helping growers utilize alfalfa benefits: z.umn.edu/rotation.